ARC 1000, Orientation, 1 credit.

The lecture is an introduction to architecture as a career and field of academic study. The course highlights the relationship of architecture to other design professions, roles of the architect in society, and purpose and functions of the profession are general topics for discussion and exploration. The course also surveys academic policies and the curriculum leading to the pre-professional, profession and post-professional degrees offered.

Course Goals & Objectives:

To introduce students to the rigor of architectural education
To introduce students to policies and the resources of the School of Architecture
To create an awareness of the many aspects of the profession of architecture

Student Performance Criterion/addressed:

None

Topical Outline:

Introduction to Architecture  75%
Academic Policies  25%

Prerequisites:

None

Textbooks/Learning Resources:

College Survival Guide

Offered:

Fall only; annually

Faculty assigned:

Ronald Lumpkin (F/T)
Rodner B. Wright (F/T)