Why should you attend the FATE Regional Panhandle Symposium?

Because you want to hear about ways we should be scaling up the redesign of teacher education and schools from David Imig, former president of American Association for Colleges of Teacher Education (AACTE); Donna Gollnick, Senior Vice President of National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education (NCATE); Eve Hall, Senior Vice President, Program Innovation, Policy and Research, Thurgood Marshall College Fund; and Leila Vickers, Former Dean, College of Education, North Carolina A&T University.

Because you want to hear testimonial on ways we should be scaling up the redesign of teacher education and schools from Marie Byrd-Blake, Assistant Professor, College of Education, University of South Florida; Carrie Robinson, Professor of Education Leadership and Counseling, New Jersey City University; Jesse Jackson, Superintendent of Lake Wales Charter School; John Bruno, Dean, Teacher Education, Flagler College; Ashley Griffin, Teacher Education student, Flagler College; Genniver Bell, Dean, College of Education, FAMU; and Patrick Mason, Professor of Economics, Florida State University and Teachers for a New Era Visiting Research Scholar.

Because you want to get a legislative update from Gary Siplin, Senator, Florida District 19.

Because you want to honor Anne Gayles-Felton and Evelyn Florence, both of whom will receive awards for their contributions to teacher education and schools.

Because you want to see Brooke Haycock, Artist-In-Residence, The Education Trust, perform a dynamic performance on the educational struggles and ultimate triumphs of schools, educators, and students who refuse to settle for anything short of real success. Straight from the mouths of students, teachers, and school leaders and onto the stage.....catch the Buzz and hear the story of the aerodynamicist and the bumble bee.

Because YOU want to be part of the conversation and provide recommendations for scaling up teacher education and schools.

It’s on a Saturday so you won’t have to miss any classes!

It’s right here in Tallahassee in the new Florida State University Turnbull Conference Center with plenty of parking.

And it’s free!
